About the Book

This timely book offers a world history of insurgencies and of counterinsurgency warfare. Working beyond traditional Western-centric narrative, arguing that it is crucial to ground experiences in Afghanistan and Iraq in a global framework. Unlike other studies that begin with the American and French revolutions, this book reaches back to antiquity to trace the pre-modern origins of war. Interweaving thematic and chronological narratives, Black probes the enduring linkages between beliefs, events, and people on the one hand and changes over time on the other hand. He shows the extent to which politics, technologies, and ideologies have evolved, creating new parameters and paradigms that have framed both governmental and public views.

About the Authors

Jeremy Black is professor emeritus of history at the University of Exeter. His books include The Importance of Being Poirot, The World of James Bond, and A History of the Second World War in 100 Maps. He lives in Exeter, United Kingdom.

Praise for the Book

“Black brings methodological and historiographical sophistication to bear on a vast topic. His insights, grounded in a thorough examination of examples of insurgent warfare from ancient times to the present, will be valuable to military and social historians and to contemporary policy makers alike.”
— Stephen Morillo, Wabash College

“Dr. Black reminds us that insurgencies are not new but permeate history. The West would do well to take heed in Dr. Black’s conclusion: think global, historical, and flexible. This is military analysis at its most sobering and instructive.”
— Edward Gutiérrez, Director, Center for Military History and Grand Strategy, Hillsdale College
